The Geographical Association takes page adverts and inserts in its three journals, which cover all levels of education from early years to higher education. Our readership encompasses students, teachers and lecturers in schools, colleges and universities nationally and internationally. The journals are made available to subscribers both in print and online.

Primary Geographer

For Early Years and Primary teachers

Primary Geographer is a termly full colour journal helping teachers deliver geography from early years to key stage 2. Each issue has a different geographical focus and includes practical guidance, research articles, information about resources, ICT and current events and 'extras' such as posters and pull-outs.

Teaching Geography

The journal for secondary teachers

Teaching Geography is a termly full colour journal for secondary teachers and lecturers. As well as articles on topical issues, innovative classroom ideas and examples of good practice, Teaching Geography also has regular features on ICT, assessment and professional development.

Geography

An international journal of geography

Geography is a termly colour publication which meets the interests of lecturers, teachers and students in post-16 plus teachers of secondary geography. Articles range from recent research and analysis to environmental and human issues. Geography is held in the majority of university and college libraries in the UK.
