

Outstanding teaching and learning in primary geography

CPD Training Courses
from the Geographical Association

London Friday 3 February 2012
Manchester Monday 5 March 2012
Bristol Monday 19 March 2012

Target audience

Primary teachers and subject co-ordinators

Overview

This course is designed to address key areas of concern highlighted by primary teachers across the country. It will help you promote high quality geographical learning and teaching in your school and ensure that the geography you plan and deliver is progressive, meaningful, emotive and inspiring.

The day will include a mix of presentations, group work and practical activities and delegates should bring subject plans to the course to help with improvement planning tasks.

Aims and outcomes

This course will investigate:

- The spirit and purpose of geography for children now and in the future. The nature of the discipline will not change in 2013!
- The nature of outstanding learning and teaching in primary geography. Promoting high quality geographical detection skills.
- Assessing children's learning and setting improvement targets.
- Using the school grounds and immediate locality of the school as a rich geographical learning resource.
- Ensuring the pivotal position of geography in supporting aspects of community cohesion and the global dimension, through the investigation of distant places both in the UK and further afield.

Presenter

Jeff Stanfield, County Geography Inspector/Adviser Hampshire LA and freelance geography consultant
