

International Research in Geographical and Environmental Education

Editors: A/Prof John Lidstone
(Queensland University of Technology) and
Prof Joseph P. Stoltman (Western Michigan University)

IRGEE provides an international forum for the critique and discussion of relevant research issues in geographical and environmental education. The focus of international co-operation has shifted increasingly throughout the twentieth century towards social, geographical and environmental concerns and consequently geography and people-environment relationships have risen in importance. There is a great need for quality research in the educational implications of these changes and it is appropriate that such research should be drawn from, and disseminated to, the international community.
